Please send comments to Jessica Schultz at JSchultz@isdh.in.gov. This document is required to submit as part of the Core State Violence and Injury Prevention. Deadline to submit comments is March 31, 2016.

3. Booster Bash Collaboration:

Lauren Savitskas, Injury Prevention Program Coordinator, discussed upcoming plans of the ISDH Trauma and Injury Prevention Division to fund "Big Kid Booster Bashes" around the state for whoever would like to participate this summer. ISDH will provide the supplies for the bashes, the seats and assist with recruiting technicians. They will even help you plan an event! The idea is to have something for the big kids and reach that 5-9 age group that so desperately still needs to be in a booster seat, but are often pre-maturely graduated to a seat belt. If you have a pre-existing summer event already scheduled--such as a community health fair or a zoo day, etc. ISDH can coordinate the Big Kid Booster Bash to be held at the same time, OR we can coordinate a booster bash independently. If you would like to participate or need more information, please contact Lauren at Lsavitskas@isdh.in.gov or call 317-234-9657.

4. CDC Core State VIPP Funding Opportunity Announcement Updates

Jessica gave a brief update that the ISDH is still in the process of applying for this opportunity.

5. Child Safety CoIIN Update

Katie Hokanson gave a brief update on the Child Safety CoIIN strategy teams. Strategy teams are composed of state/jurisdiction representatives and leadership team members. They focus on one of the topics of the CoIIN. The main goal of the CS CoIIN is to forge collaborative partnerships across silos and state lines, streamline child safety messages and activities and increase the adoption of effective child safety interventions at state and local levels.

6. Injury Prevention Resource Guide & App Update

The app has been downloaded 550 times and launched 2,010 times (as of 3/15/2016). Please be sure to use and share the app!

4. Joint Meeting with Indiana Violent Death Reporting System (INVDRS) Advisory Board: Trauma Center-based Violence Prevention Programs in Rice auditorium 1 – 3 p.m.

The purpose of this meeting is to bring together the INVDRS and IPAC to discuss violence prevention programs at Indiana trauma centers. It was decided to join the groups together after staff toured the trauma centers to learn more about what programs they are implementing. We also heard from the INVDRS Advisory Board that they would like to learn more about the violence prevention programs around the state. Meeting attendees introduced themselves.

Due to technical difficulties with the webcast and phone line, Lynne Bunch, Administrative Director and Nicole Perkins, Center of Hope Coordinator, IU Health Ball Memorial Hospital were unable to present about the IU Health Ball Memorial Center of Hope. We thank them for preparing their presentation and apologize for the issues.

Katie Hokanson announced the ISDH was recently awarded funds for the Prescription Drug Overdose Prevention for States funding opportunity. ISDH had been previously awarded, but not funded and now will receive funds to perform grant activities. More information will be released in the coming weeks.

1) Danielle Gilyan, Injury Prevention Program Coordinator at Smith Level I Shock Trauma Center at Eskenazi Health

Phone: 317-880-5037

Dannielle.gilyan@eskenazihealth.edu

Eskenazi currently has several violence prevention programs because penetrating trauma is the leading mechanism of injury, with the second as gunshot injuries, followed by falls.

Prescription for hope

- Created in 2009
- Program offer wraparound services and links to community programs
- Recidivism rates went from 30.8% to 4.6% in 3 years

Soaring High program

- Emphasis: Critical thinking, self-reflection, positive self-expression, respect for others & themselves

EKG – Educating Kids about Gun Violence

Project Life

- Referred by Marion County Juvenile Probation
- 3 day program

Injury Prevention Perspective:

ENCARE – Emergency Nurses Cancel Alcohol Related Emergencies

DEAD – Adults with DUI. 30-minute presentation.

Community Outreach – health fairs, community events

ASK campaign: ASK is done for youth. It encourages people to ask if your youth is going to another house if there is an unsecured gun in that home.

2) Dr. Michael McGee, Chief and Medical Director for Emergency Medicine Departments at Methodist Hospitals

This program raising awareness in NW Indiana about violence. Dr. McGee shared the firearm-related death rates by country, specifically highlighting the five leading causes of death for 10-24 year olds. Gun deaths are predicted to overtake annual motor vehicle deaths, and there is a link with drugs and alcohol. Hospitals have a vested interest in violence prevention to prevent recidivism and save money.

Project Outreach and Prevention – POP

- Snapshot of NWI Trauma, 2013-2015 shows high amount of penetrating trauma, with the most common reason for penetrating injuries is retaliation.
- Began in 2008, program targets the Lake County Juvenile Center and court system.
- Hosted a 5K to raise funds and formed community partnerships for success.
- Encourages career options and educational opportunities for high schoolers. On MLK day they had 40+ students who came to the hospital and learned from a panel of medical personnel.

SAVE Program: Students in school began Students Against Violence Everywhere

- SAVE program began in 1985. A student died while trying to break up a fight in a high school.
- April 4-8 events. PEP Rally Tour throughout NWI. National Youth Violence Prevention Week. 30-minute pep rally at schools. Culminates at Gary Center on Friday.
- Long term plans: Starting August they will expand the SAVE program to all of NW Indiana schools. This past year was the pilot year, and upcoming years will focus on younger kids.

3) Jill Castor: Trauma Educator and Outreach Coordinator at IU Health Methodist

Email: jcastor@iuhealth.org

Beth's Legacy of Hope

- Domestic violence is the main focus of the program and it started in 2012. A fellow nurse was killed by her partner, which lead to the action to prevent future domestic violence injuries and death through health care providers appropriately screening and responding to victims. The program includes a video that tells Beth's stories and interview the forensic nurses.
- They will have trained 6,000 employees by the end of this year on this video. This is now mandated at IU Health. They have taken this video out to churches and libraries. This is a tertiary prevention program. One in four of their IU Health employees self-identifies as being a victim of domestic violence, so injury and violence prevention can be done in the community of your hospital system.
- They developed a 12-week counseling sessions. The first 6 weeks are educational groups. The last 6 weeks are closed (had to do the first 6 weeks). They are rotating these around the community.
- They provide wraparound services and people do not have to check in to the hospital in order to receive help at our hospital. They can walk into the hospital and receive the services they need.

- Center of Hope: These provide forensic services – they treat sexual assaulted people.
- IU Health Domestic Violence Coalition meets monthly to talk about programs to implement. They have provider packets for all of the clinics with a start-up kit on how to ask these screening questions and they are developing a train-the-trainer for the video.

4) Lynn Coleman, Community Trauma Liaison/ Violence Prevention Coordinator, Memorial Hospital of South Bend Trauma Services

- Lynn became involved in 2015 after retiring from law enforcement and working with the Mayor's office. The program is based out of Memorial South Bend and they have not identified a formal name for the program. South Bend has problems with gangs and shootings, but also domestic violence and special populations affected by violence. John Jay College of Criminal Justice has worked with the city and partners to identify ways to have programs to mitigate problems they are having. St. Joe hospital, Notre Dame, and others have joined with the city to create Group Violence Intervention, and Memorial South Bend created own program.
- Through Memorial South Bend, Lynn is available and on call to go out to the scene with the first responders to calm down the situation so the emergency department is not shut down. Lynn meets with each victim of violence, whether at the hospital or later at home.
- Lynn noted that there are two targets for the program: Recidivism and retaliation. Recidivism is high and costly to the community and hospital. Retaliation continues the cycle and patients in the hospital may go hurt someone else due to their injury.
- They work to identify modifiable factors to change the situation because violence is a social drain on the community, and a drain on hospital finances, although this is less of a focus.
- They work with the juvenile justice center and centers for the homeless and other community partners. Kids are experimenting with being in gangs and bullying, so they created a program and take each kid going through the juvenile program for battery or violence and show them consequences of their actions. They also target schools. They bring kids from different school systems together and have safe environment to talk about their issues.
- The Call In Program is a collaborative program with the community through the police department held 3-4 times a year. They identify groups of young men who show a propensity to engage in violence. The program and partners tell the participants 'we will help you if you let us but we will stop you if you make us.' The program provides services in a variety of areas, including securing housing, IDs, birth certificates, safe housing. Their friends may be referred to the program.

Question: Has South Bend had gang violence for a while?

Answer: It started early, mid-80's with the influx of the cocaine epidemic. We don't have the numbers that Gary and Chicago have, but we are a smaller area. We are averaging 20 homicides a year. Then it dropped down to low 10, up to 30. Our fantastic staff at Memorial has helped keep our homicide rate down by providing high levels of care, but the patients are still coming in.

Katie and Jessica thanked the speakers for haring about their programs. Jessica remarked that the IPAC Conference will be held on May 19th. Next meetings: 3rd Friday of the Month: 10 a.m. – 12 p.m. July 15, September 16, and November 18.

Meeting Handouts:

- ISDH Strategic Plan for Injury Prevention
- Terms of Reference 2016-2018
